Additional comments

Was in FL on vacation last week and we saw at least 4 cats that don't appear to have notched ears. You will need to coordinate with the management of the property. We did feed them when we were there. The black and white female was skittish, but good about being pet with food available. The male we saw would linger out of reach, but when we left he would eat. He is an orange polydactyl male. We were staying in building 23 on the property. I know other people were feeding them, and given the nature of the property I'm sure others who stay there will feed them.
